Dear Parishioners:

Thanksgiving is the best time of the year to celebrate the many blessings Our Heavenly Father bestows on us and our families.

The air becomes crisp, and the leaves of the trees change color and fall...It is a time to come together, enjoy the company of family and friends, and pause to give thanks to the Lord.

May God bless your home and fill your lives with joy, health, and peace.

I wish you a very Happy and Blessed Thanksgiving.

Queridos feligreses,

Esta es la mayor época del año para celebrar tantas bendiciones que Nuestro Padre Celestial nos otorga a nosotros y a nuestras familias.

El aire se vuelve fresco y las hojas de los árboles cambian de color y caen...Es un tiempo para reunirse, disfrutar de la compañía de familiares y amigos y hacer una pausa para dar gracias al Señor por tantas bendiciones recibidas durante el año.

Que Dios bendiga su hogar y llene sus vidas de alegría, salud y paz.

Les deseo un muy feliz y bendecido Día de Acción de Gracias.

Reflexión del Domingo

La mujer de la primera lectura es considerada digna, y sin duda lo es, pues el autor declara que ella es bondadosa con su marido durante toda su vida. Ella también usa sus talentos y sus habilidades para servir a su familia, pues procura los materiales para trabajar la lana y manejar la rueca “con sus hábiles manos” (Proverbios 31, 13). Pero eso no es todo. Ella incluso usa sus dones para ayudar a los pobres y necesitados. El escritor luego revela que la mujer teme al Señor. Ése es su secreto. Su veneración a Dios le hace servir a su esposo, a su familia y a los pobres, y por eso —como escuchamos en la última frase— es digna de ser alabada por todos. En verdad, su valor es muy superior al de las perlas, pues con su generosidad ella le ha hecho bien a multitudes.

Cuando compartimos nuestros talentos ponemos de manifiesto la presencia de Dios y proclamamos la generosidad de Dios con tanta fuerza como si lo gritáramos desde las azoteas, aunque no nos percatemos de ello. Tal vez eso sea lo que quiere indicar Jesús en su parábola: no que Dios quiere que dupliquemos nuestro dinero por invertir sabiamente, sino que compartamos nuestros dones y usemos nuestros talentos para construir el Reino de Dios, para difundir la buena nueva en todo rincón y toda rendija de nuestro mundo. Notemos las últimas palabras dirigidas a los dos servidores buenos y fieles: “Entra a tomar parte en la alegría de tu señor” (Mateo 25, 21. 23).

Compartir los talentos que Dios nos ha dado nos conduce a participar de la alegría del Señor. “No hay papeles insignificantes, sino actores insignificantes”, fue una frase famosa del director ruso Konstantin Stanislavski, pues insistía en que aún los actores con papeles aparentemente insignificantes, pueden entregarse del todo a su papel. Tanto el servidor a quien le dieron sólo dos talentos como el que recibió solamente uno parecían tener sólo papeles insignificantes el día en que el amo repartió los talentos. Pero uno de ellos le sacó el máximo provecho a lo que había recibido. Se le confió poco, pero ahora estaba seguro que se le iba a confiar mucho más. Ya desde ahora se le invita a compartir la alegría de su amo. Aunque ni siquiera se le dio la mitad de lo que recibió el primer servidor, así y todo probó ser un servidor bueno y fiel. También nosotros nos esforzamos porque se nos considere buenos y fieles. No importa cuán poco sea lo que se nos ha dado, estamos llamados a usarlo en servicio de algo o de alguien, más allá de nosotros mismos.

¿Cómo comparto mis dones? ¿Qué talento me han dicho que tengo, pero me da miedo compartirlo abiertamente?

Rev. Fernando Diaz

Sunday Reflection

The woman of the first reading is considered worthy, and certainly is, because the author declares that she was kind to her husband throughout her life. She also uses her talents and abilities to serve her family, as she procures the materials to work the wool and handle the spinning wheel “with her skillful hands” (Proverbs 31:13). But that’s not all. She even uses her gifts to help the poor and needy. The writer then reveals that the woman fears the Lord. That is her secret. Her veneration of God makes her serve her husband, her family, and the poor, and that is why — as we heard in the last sentence — she is worthy of praise by all. In truth, her value is far superior to pearls, for with her generosity she has done good for others.

When we share our talents we reveal God’s presence and proclaim God’s generosity as strongly as if we would have shouted it from the rooftops, even if we don’t realize it. Perhaps that is what Jesus means in his parable: Not that God wants us to double our money by investing wisely, but to share our gifts and use our talents to build the Kingdom of God, to spread the good news in every corner of the earth. Note the last words addressed to the two good and faithful servants: “Enter into the joy of your master” (Matthew 25:21, 23).

Sharing the talents that God has given us leads us to participate in the Lord’s joy. “There are no insignificant roles, but insignificant actors,” was a famous phrase by Russian director Konstantin Stanislavski, insisting that even actors with seemingly insignificant roles, can give themselves to their role. Both the servant to whom two talents was given and the one who received only one seemed to have only negligible roles on the day the master distributed the talents. But one of them made the most of the little that was entrusted to him, and now he was sure that much more would be entrusted to him. From that moment he was invited to share in the joy of his master. Although he was not even given half of what the first server received, he proved to be a good and faithful servant. We too strive to be considered good and faithful. No matter how little we have been given, we are called to use it in the service of something or someone other than ourselves.

How do we share our talents? What talent have I been told I have, but am scared to share openly?

Padre Fernando Diaz
